

* * *

Citizens of Maryland,

“A Native of Maryland”* having accomplished the grand object which I had at heart, I deem it altogether unnecessary on my part, to publish the remarks that I had placed on paper, the publication of which was intended by me in the news-papers of this town. Be it known unto all of you, that the character who is the reputed father of the Infidel law, is not a native citizen of Maryland, but a Scotchman. It is a notorious fact, that infidelity has made a greater, & more alarming progress in the land of cakes (population considered) than in any other part of the Christian world. Beware of wolves in sheep's clothing! Such upas-like characters may be found, are met with every day, in the City of Washington; in Leesburg, Commonwealth of Virginia; in the City of Baltimore, and in Hagers-town, state of Maryland.—
“Cease, Vipers! ye bite at a File!”
If a Native of Maryland has no objection, I shall be rendered extremely happy, by being furnished with an opportunity of presenting my personal respects to him. I pede cito, et fausto! Good and faithful citizen.

Yours, respectfully,

BENJAMIN GALLOWAY.

Hagers-town, Sept. 13.

* See the first page of this paper.